

California Art Leaders Investments (CALI)

California's emerging arts leaders have a strong commitment to both their arts career and to California. That's reassuring because the nonprofit arts field is undergoing significant leadership transition. As the leadership of the arts community transforms, we recognize that the health of the arts sector relies on having a robust pipeline of interested and skilled arts professionals ready to lead. In order to meet this need, CCI is helping emerging leaders access professional development opportunities that will increase their skills and enable them to exercise their leadership capacity now to prepare them for the future.

In collaboration with The William and Flora Hewlett Foundation, CCI is providing grants targeted to providing emerging California arts leaders with scholarships to pursue activities that will develop and enhance their professional skills.

ALERT - New Guidelines: Since 2010, CCI has provided emerging arts professionals with NextGen professional development support to develop a pipeline of professionals for the arts field. Beginning December 2015, guidelines have been updated to de-emphasize age as a criterion as well as to place greater attention on helping these professionals advance professionally. This change is reflected in the new name for this program: No longer called the NextGen Arts Grants program (NextGen), the program is now called California Art Leaders Investments (CALI). Please review these guidelines carefully as they have changed.

Purpose:

The California Art Leaders Investments program provides professional development grants to emerging arts leaders in California to pursue leadership opportunities and activities that will advance their careers in the arts. Eligible activities include participating in national conferences, attending training workshops, or working with consultants or coaches, with funding priority given to resume-building activities to practice professional skills and showcase one's capacity to lead the arts sector.

Awards:

Individuals meeting the CALI program eligibility criteria below may apply for one grant of up to $1,000 per year to support the direct costs of proposed leadership activities. Otherwise, there are no restrictions to the number of times one can apply or number of grants one has received previously. Grant applications are accepted and funding decisions are made on a rolling basis throughout the year with an application deadline on the 15th of every month (see "How to Apply"). Grants are awarded in advance of proposed activities, and payments are made through the applicant's nonprofit arts organization (i.e., qualifying place of work).

Eligibility:

To be eligible, individuals must:

- Currently work or be officially affiliated with a California nonprofit arts organization as an administrator, artist, or board member;
- Be a current California resident;
- Have been employed fewer than 10 consecutive years in the arts field;
- Be registered with the CALI cohort by completing the online California Art Leaders Investments survey. If you are already registered (previously called the NextGen survey), you DO NOT need to take it again. Please complete the online survey located here to be eligible to apply for the current CALI review; and
- Not have received a grant from this program (formerly called NextGen, now called CALI) within the past 12 months of this application.

Priority will be given to individuals who are:

- In entry-level or middle-management positions within their organization, or who have recently transitioned into executive leadership or board member positions;
- At organizations outside of major metropolitan areas of Los Angeles and the San Francisco Bay Area in order to encourage participation throughout the state; and
- Not previously supported through NextGen or CALI program.

Priority will be given to projects that are:

- Externally facing leadership opportunities, such as, but not limited to, initiating, organizing, and presenting on a conference panel, contributing research or writing for a field publication, or leading program development or an initiative in the arts field.

Eligible Costs:

CALI grants may be used for a wide range of activities aimed at strengthening the individual's arts leadership, business or career skills, and affording the costs of participating in or initiating leadership-level activities, including:

- Tuition or registration fees for workshops, conferences, and trainings;
