

CAL-NOW

2019 Guidelines

Deadline: October 31, 2019 by 5:00 p.m. PST

A program of the Center for Cultural Innovation with support from the William & Flora Hewlett Foundation

PURPOSE

The CAL-Now grants program supports independent, dedicated emerging arts leadership associations in California.

It is safe to say that the future doesn't get better purely by accident. The future will certainly look different because of today's demographic changes, generational attitudinal shifts, and technological innovations that accelerate and amplify the pace of change. In order to shape the arts field to continually improve—so that it is more sustainable and sustaining, and inclusive of the diversity of people's unique perspectives and varied artistic expressions—CCI is investing in California's emerging arts leader infrastructure to shape a stronger arts sector.

The CAL-Now grants program will provide one year of general operating support to emerging arts leadership associations in California. These groups, individually and as a statewide network, help early-career professionals of all ages and backgrounds to build long-lasting professional relationships, practice leadership, and gain knowledge and informed perspectives. They provide opportunities for individuals in the arts—artists and arts workers—to exercise influence now so that they can become powerful leaders in the future. California's arts and culture community has benefited from the existence of emerging arts leadership associations, which help the field identify and engage future arts leaders thus ensuring that their perspectives inform policies and practices. The arts field is more relevant when incorporating their voices, and emerging arts leader entities contribute to the arts sector's vitality.

APPLICATION PROCESS & ELIGIBILITY CRITERIA

Through the support of the William and Flora Hewlett Foundation, CCI is providing $160,000 in 2019 to California-based emerging arts leader associations. CCI has been supporting emerging leaders in the state since 2010 (formerly through the Next Generation Arts Leadership Initiative) and, through this work, has identified qualified entities to invite to apply. However, if you have not been invited and these guidelines and eligibility seem to be a fit, please send an email inquiry introducing yourself and why you think your group qualifies to info@cciarts.org, with the subject line "CAL-Now qualification inquiry."

The eligibility requirements for CAL-Now are that emerging arts leader associations must:

- Be based and operating solely in California.
- Be structured as a nonprofit or fiscally sponsored.
- Be operating independently (not as a project or a time-limited venture serving another organization's purpose). Independence indicates seriousness of the endeavor as well as indicating that the efforts of running an organization and serving the field are led by early-career participants.
- Be dedicated to the sole purpose of serving as an emerging arts leadership association for their region.
- Be a generalist arts association open to emerging arts professionals—both arts workers and artists—of all artistic disciplines, types of organizational positions, and sectors (commercial, academic, and nonprofit) with information about how to participate or join in publicly accessible ways (e.g., Facebook group, dedicated website, etc.).

REVIEW PROCESS & CRITERIA

CCI will invite applications from already-recognized emerging arts leader associations. Those that successfully complete and submit their applications will participate in a shared review process. CCI will facilitate a participatory grantmaking panel review wherein one representative from each applicant organization (i.e., panelist) will review all the applications and participate in the review meeting. Panelists will determine how to award the pool of $160,000 in available funds. In this way, the decision-making is not only transparent but also shared. The participatory grantmaking approach is intended to fulfill objectives of the CAL-Now grant program—to shift grant decision-making power to grantseekers, to facilitate exchange of information and build the relationships amongst the emerging arts entities in the state, and to provide professional development to grant reviewers.

Individual grant reviewers will receive a modest panelist honorarium in recognition of their time. Each panelist will:

- Review and preliminarily score one another’s proposal in advance of the meeting.
- At the meeting, panelists will discuss each proposal and the application pool as a whole.
- Through a facilitated process, panelists will come to general consensus on how much to award each organization, including one’s own.

Panelists will review applicants’ narrative proposals, operating budgets, bios, strategic plans, calendars of activities, and work samples in order to evaluate applications according to the following criteria:

- Relevance of the proposed activities to applicant’s strategic objectives.
- Importance of the proposed activities to the community (both people and region) they serve.
- Potential to realize more financial growth or stability over the course of the grant period.
- Reflects the diversity that is in their regions, or addresses how they plan to do so over time.
- Budget indicates capacity to accomplish proposed activities over the grant period.
- Demonstrates willingness and intentionality to participate in the statewide CAL-Now network as both a beneficiary and a contributor.
- Important contributor to California’s emerging arts leader association infrastructure.
- Has met (or is meeting) requirements and deadlines of other funders.
